

Mark Sefton KC Called 1996 Silk 2018

Practice Summary

Mark is described in Chambers and Partners and the Legal 500 as “outstandingly clever”, “incredibly bright”, “a tenacious fighter”, “practical and commercial”, and “a marvel”. “He has a remarkable gift for predicting what judges will say and do”, and is “fantastically good on the technical side as well as being great at the client facing”. His “grasp of property valuations and their methodology is second to none.”

Mark practises in all areas of commercial and residential landlord and tenant and property law, but has particular expertise in the following:

- Development agreements
- Rent review
- Valuation disputes
- Overage
- Leasehold enfranchisement
- Options
- Contractual interpretation
- Dilapidations
- Lease renewals under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954
- Easements and rights to light
- Sale and purchase agreements
- Property-related insolvency
- Complex commercial transactions
- Injunctions against protesters

In recent years, Mark has been instructed in a series of multi-billion pound valuation arbitrations concerning the largest residential property portfolio in England and Wales. He acted in the largest-ever open market rent review in Hong Kong, about a logistics facility in the Kwai Chung container port. He was instructed in the Supreme Court in the leading case on implied terms in contracts, Marks and Spencer v BNP Paribas, and he has appeared in both the Supreme Court and in the House of Lords in cases about leasehold enfranchisement. Before taking silk, he was the Real Estate Junior of the Year at the Chambers and Partners Bar Awards. Mark accepts instructions to act as a legal assessor and as an arbitrator, and he is widely recognised as having particular skill in disputes about valuation.
